

Daniel Domke

Daniel has a broad background in both private industry and career and technical education. He and his wife have owned an aviation business for the past 25 years. Domke is an instrument rated pilot, federally licensed aircraft mechanic and ASE certified automotive technician. Before becoming CTE director Daniel served as a welding teacher in the Kodiak Island School District. He then taught automotive technology for six years before serving as the assistant principal and then principal at James T. Hutchison High School in Fairbanks. During this time Hutchison transformed from a traditional vocational school into a comprehensive high school with a CTE focus. Programs of study were developed which offer industry certifications in high wage, high skill, high demand career pathways. In 2013, Domke's last year as principal, Hutchison was recognized as a high progress school by the state of Alaska.