

Rebekah Matrosova – Biography:

Rebekah Matrosova is the Director of Outreach & Early Awareness for the Alaska Commission on Postsecondary Education. Ms. Matrosova oversees the agency's initiatives to promote successful career & education planning statewide, including: programs to establish early awareness of the individual and collective benefits associated with postsecondary attainment; career & education planning tools, resources, and direct services; and public messaging to promote awareness of resources including state financial aid programs. In addition to previous positions held at ACPE, Ms. Matrosova's professional experience includes serving as International Exchange Program Coordinator for the University of Alaska Anchorage's American Russian Center and as Team Lead of a technical writing team for a major financial software platform. Ms. Matrosova holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in journalism & public Communications, as well as languages, and a Masters of Public Administration in public management from the University of Alaska Anchorage.

"I have been privileged to be a part of the Network since it was first conceptualized, at ACPE, and seen it through growth from an idea to a fully-fledged, independent non-profit organization receiving its own private grant funding. I have served on the Board since the first election, including chairing and participating on numerous committees, and would be honored to continue to serve. I firmly believe in our capacity as a cross-sector collective to accomplish more together than we can accomplish alone – and look forward to our continued work!"
